

Crafting Your Vision

Your vision statement should take your mission statements to the next level of clarity. Drafting your vision statement will also give you the content you need to visualize the life you want to live on a regular basis.

Vision Statement Tips

Use the present tense

Use all your senses

Build on your mission statements

Make time to write

YOUR VISION STATEMENT

DIRECTIONS: Review your life missions in the Your Life Missions document you created. Describe in vivid detail what your life would look like if you were accomplishing all those missions. You might need to write several paragraphs to describe your vision completely. Make sure to address and include each mission. Before you begin, check out others' vision statements below to guide your own writing!

Sample #1

My vision in life is living a very happy and full life. Spiritually, I am finding something to believe in. I have always believed in myself and my abilities to get me somewhere, but I may be on a path to discover more.

I am married to the love of my life with two healthy, smart, caring, and beautiful children. We reside in our dream home in Manhattan Beach, California with our two dogs.

I am at a job where I can set my own hours and am able to work remotely if I want. I am making enough money to be comfortable supporting my family and giving generously to those who are in need.

My family and I eat healthy food and live an active lifestyle. We are able to rid our bodies of all potential risk factors for chronic disease and hope to end the cycle of disease in our family trees.

Through my community work and knowing others, I am able to influence others with health and wellness through classes, workshops, books, etc. I am working with many organizations that hit close to home and guide those who need help.

I have obtained both my master's and doctorate degrees.

I have traveled to many places all over the world and will continue to do so with friends and family.

Sample #2

I intend to be the first lawyer of my immigrant family. I will help immigrants and serve as a tool and support system for those who cannot help themselves.

I will bring joy to families by keeping them together and I will fight for women who are oppressed. I will be a career woman who will work to be the change I want to see in this world.

My job will consist of lifting the oppressed through my kind acts of service. I will dedicate my life to showing the oppressed that there is beauty in struggle and that our country is indeed the land of opportunity.

I was born into poverty in the beautiful country of El Salvador and, although my parents lived in the U.S. and worked hard enough to one day bring my siblings and me here, I believe it is my duty to serve my people—a duty I take very seriously and that serves as the motivation for everything I do.

Anyone who knows me knows I am extremely passionate about service and humanitarian work. Though it is not easy at times, I plan to devote my life to what I consider my calling on this earth. I have met the most amazing people during my service and these same people—who have nothing materialistically—have enhanced my life immeasurably.

Your Vision Statement